Deep Bay

Improvements will go ahead on a short stretch of Deep Bay Road in spite of objections voiced by cottagers. Please see page 2.

Pro-Chretien

Victoria-Haliburton Liberals gave full support to Jean Chretien's leadership bid and rejected the pro-life uprising during the selection of delegates to go to the leadership convention. Please see page 6.

Hard work

If you think provincial politicians spend their days relaxing with their feet up, think again says Nancy McDonald. She spent a month as a page in Legislative Assembly and discovered politics is a lot of hard work. Please see page 11.

Building seminar

Local politicians and building officials attended an intensive session of building seminars in Lindsay last week. Former Minister of Municipal Affairs John Eakins urged better co-operation among municipalities in opening remarks at this day-long session. Please see page 12.

County ups pressure for transfer of timber rights

Haliburton and Hastings County Councils are joining forces to convince the Minister of Natural Resources to transfer timber rights to the buyer of G.W. Martin saw mill.

The neighbouring counties are requesting a meeting with Lyn McLeod to discuss this final roadblock in the sale of the Harcourt mill to Robert Bury and Company.

The Harcourt mill closed its doors almost a year ago, laying off 125 employees after unsuccessfully trying to sell the division since September of 1988. Robert Bury and Company's recent offer to purchase sparked new hope that the employees will regain their jobs, but the sale hinges on the ministry's willingness to transfer Martin's timber rights to the new company.

The April 10 closing date for the sale has come and gone, and still there is no word from the ministry. Unless the transfer is approved, the sale will not close.

The mere sight of them sends little girls screaming, but there are some other interesting things to be learned about worms, as Simon Prentice demonstrated with his science project last week. He discovered that the slithering critters are attracted to magnets and ice. Grade 7 and 8 students at Archie Stouffer Elementary School showed their stuff at the second annual science fair Wednesday.

Dysart sewer extension approved

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The Minister of the Environment has given his approval for Dysart et al's proposed sewage plant expansion and resort sewer line extension.

After two years of waiting, the project will soon be ready to go to tender now that outstanding environmental concerns have been addressed.

The project has been on hold since last summer after two cottage associations requested that the sewage plant expansion be 'bumped-up' to an Individual Environmental Assessment.

The residents on the Kashagawigamog Lake chain were worried that an expansion of the sewage treatment plant would result in further deterioration of the water quality in the lakes.

But Dysart Reeve Bill Davis has received a letter from environment minister Jim Bradley, informing the township that both the sewage plant expansion and the new sewer line can proceed without further environmental assessment.

Davis says he intends to call a meeting this week of the resort owners and the consultants to "discuss the project and make sure everyone is still on line."

Bradley also informed Davis that $1 million in funding will be made available immediately to cover initial costs of preparing for the expansion.

Davis says he wants to Hospital funds remain intact

St. Joseph's Executive Director says the issue has been misconstrued

It's highly unlikely that donations will be used to pay architect fees for the Haliburton Hospital expansion says St. Joseph's Executive Director.

The idea of taking from the pool of donated money to pay these fees was offered only as a "hypothetical" possibility, Frank Lussing told The Times last week. "It was a red herring to begin with... a non issue," he said.

Several doctors and MPP John Eakins expressed their concerns to the St. Joseph's Hospital board after a recent newspaper article said public funds raised for the proposed hospital expansion may be used to pay architects who were hired to draft plans for the project. (The Haliburton Hospital is owned by St. Joseph's in Peterborough).

Lussing, however, says there is no reason for concern at this time. He said he was responding to a hypothetical question when he said it is possible the $126,000 bill might be paid out of donated funds. "Theoretically it's possible," he said, "but it's not likely."

More than $400,000 was generated through a local fundraising campaign for an 18-bed chronic care addition to the Haliburton Hospital. Plans for the expansion were drawn up and the project was ready to go ahead until the Ministry of Health pulled in the reins last spring.

The ministry had promised to pay two thirds of the construction costs. However, that funding is being withheld until a long-term health care study can be completed.

Lussing says all the money that was donated for this project has been placed into a trust fund and is collecting interest. "Not a single charge has been levied against it," he said.

The ministry and St. Joseph's have paid their shares of the architect fees. Lussing said the hospital's share came out of the general account.

When the payment is formalized in the year-end accounting for the hospital but Lussing says it is not likely the hospital will be charging this expense against any of the funds raised in the community for the expansion.

Design-related fees normally represent a part of any building project, though, says Lussing. Therefore, if the expansion is built, these fees would be charged against that project.

Decision is expected soon

Monmouth Reeve Keith Tallman reiterated the importance of this transfer during last Wednesday's meeting. He said the deal will not go through unless all of Martin's timber rights are passed over to the buyer.

Tallman also commented on a rumour that the ministry might only be willing to transfer half the logging rights to Robert Bury and Company. "That's not adequate and the deal won't go through," he said.

Contacted Friday, MPP John Eakins dismissed the rumours about the transfer. "There have been a lot of rumours flying around, rumours that they'll be denied or that they're only going to get one third (of the timber rights)." He said there has been no determination one way or the other.

Eakins said he has spoken with the minister and everything possible is being done to give the mill enough timber rights to open.

The transfer is being handled by Algonquin Regional Forester Terry Dodds, who was in Sault Ste. Marie last week and unavailable for comment. However, Deputy Regional Director David Watton says the application is being reviewed and a response from the minister is anticipated within two weeks.

Watton said the ministry is reviewing a rationale business plan submitted by Robert Bury and Company. Before any timber rights are granted the ministry wants to know that a mill has the capacity of utilizing the wood. He said there is concern over the wood supply throughout that area and the Ottawa Valley. He said there are 14 or 15 mills in the area and the ministry wants to make sure they have the milling capacity to utilize the wood they are granted.

The question of timber rights is being addressed on a province-wide scale, said Eakins, and many mills in Ontario are experiencing timber supply problems. "It's not automatic that with the sale of a mill the rights go with it. We have to look at the whole situation."

Some, however, believe there are other factors involved in the ministry's reluctance to grant a straight-forward transfer.

David Anderson, G.W. Martin's Division Manager, wrote to the minister urging her to speed up the process. In his letter, he said there have been rumours that Renfrew North MPP Sean Conway is using his influence to have these timber rights transferred to Murray Brother and McCrea Lumber in his riding in the upper Ottawa Valley. Conway is the Education Minister in the provincial cabinet.

Anderson also notes that Conway is a relative of the Murray family.

In addition to the 125 people employed directly by the mill, it is estimated there are another 175 people in the logging and transportation industries who are indirectly affected.

G.W. Martin's 125 laid-off employees are waiting on the Ministry of Natural Resources to approve the transfer of timber rights. Some, however, suspect MPP Sean Conway is pulling to have the timber rights granted to saw mills in his own riding of Renfrew North.

Minden Deputy Reeve Bern Berry said the costs for social services in the county are increasing dramatically. In March alone, he said costs went up 9.37 per cent. Unless this sale can be settled and the employees can get back to work, Berry said the situation will worsen.

The unemployment insurance benefits for the laid-off workers runs out at the end of June.

In addition to restoring the jobs for the former G.W. Martin workers, the sale could create new jobs. Anderson said the new owners would be willing to invest in the upgrading of the plant. "Plus, future plans include secondary plants to finish the product produced here, which will certainly make more jobs for the people in this area."

Eakins says he is very concerned about the buyers' position that they are unwilling to accept anything less than 100 per cent of the timber rights. He said the company is trying to apply as much pressure as it can.

"People are suggesting that I should apply more pressure and that I'm not doing my job," Eakins said. "They say I'm only interested in tourism and not interested in the mill. This is not true. I'm very much interested in the mill."

Cottagers object to county's plan to upgrade part of Deep Bay Road

County Council is united in its support for the reconstruction of a section of Deep Bay Road in spite of strong opposition from several property owners.

Council unanimously voted to go ahead with improvements to the two-kilometre stretch of road north of Little Gull Lake at a special meeting last Wednesday. The decision was made in the face of opposition from 10 property owners who would prefer that the county road be re-routed behind their homes.

According to the justification report on this project, the hills and curves on this road interfere with vision; the narrow surface restricts traffic movement; the surface is structurally inadequate and it has poor drainage.

The county had previously considered a by-pass proposal that would reroute the road to the west of its present path. However, this council rejected that idea based mainly on costs.

It is estimated that the reconstruction of the present road will cost $840,000. The by-pass would cost $1.75 million.

In addition to higher construction costs, the creation of a by-pass would still leave the existing road to be maintained by the county or Lutterworth Township.

The justification report also notes that there would be three "deficient vertical curve" in the by-pass. "The roller coaster type vertical alignment of the by-pass route would provide minimal sight distance, a less safe situation than the proposed route along the existing roadway," the report says.

The report, however, didn't convince the cottager, who believe an improved road will encourage motorists to speed in front of their properties.

Mike Borneman, who owns a cottage just outside of the construction zone, said the decision seems to be based on costs. "I think $900,000 is the difference between the two routes," he said. If this is the case, he argued, property values should be taken into account.

Borneman said upgrading the road will require the removal of trees and boat docks, installation of barriers and faster traffic in front of the cottages. He said this will create a drop in property values. He wondered if there might be avenues available to recoup the difference in costs and suggested the cottagers might be willing to chip in some money.

If two thirds of the property owners are willing to pay the extra costs involved for the by-pass, it could be arranged, said solicitor Russ Black. However, Borneman said he doubts the cottagers would be willing to spend that much money.

Black also noted that the question of declining property values has not been established. He suggested it is theoretically possible property values could increase as a result of the work.

Ken Hack, who owns a cottage along this section of the road, said the upgrading will spoil his enjoyment of the cottage. "We are more than annoyed," he told council. "We are losing our entire reason for owning a cottage... it's completely and utterly destroyed."

Road improvements will allow motorists to speed, which will make it dangerous to walk across the road to the lake, said Hack. "Straightening doesn't improve the road, it allows people to go faster," he said.

Hack also drew council's attention to a letter he received from former County Engineer Jack Cox. The 1973 letter indicated that council had accepted the by-pass proposal. However, nothing was done at that time because the funds were not available.

If a by-pass was built, Hack said the present road should be turned over to Lutterworth Township.

However, Lutterworth Reeve Carol Puffer said her council would not be in favour of that move. She said it is the consensus of Lutterworth councillors that maintaining a township road in front of the properties and a county road behind is not feasible.

Borneman then suggested the road along the lake could be sold to the cottagers and made into a private road. In order for that to happen, though, every property owner along the strip would have to agree, said the solicitor.

The road reconstruction will also mean that one cottage will have to be removed. The cottage owned by Brian Kubels is situated on county property

Correction

The Haliburton County Social Action Committee is still an active organization.

A story in last week's Times incorrectly indicated this committee has disbanded.

Committee Chairman Gena Robertson says it is the Housing Task Force, a sub-committee of the Social Action Committee, that has been disbanded.

As the gentle spring weather finally brings touch of green to our landscape, it's difficult to imagine that our environment is being ravaged by pollution.

Winter's timely retreat brings with it a sense of renewal. Tiny plants push their way up through the damp soil. Rabbits, foxes and porcupines come out of winter hiding places. The geese are returning and wetlands are alive with the riotous chirping of birds in their mating rituals.

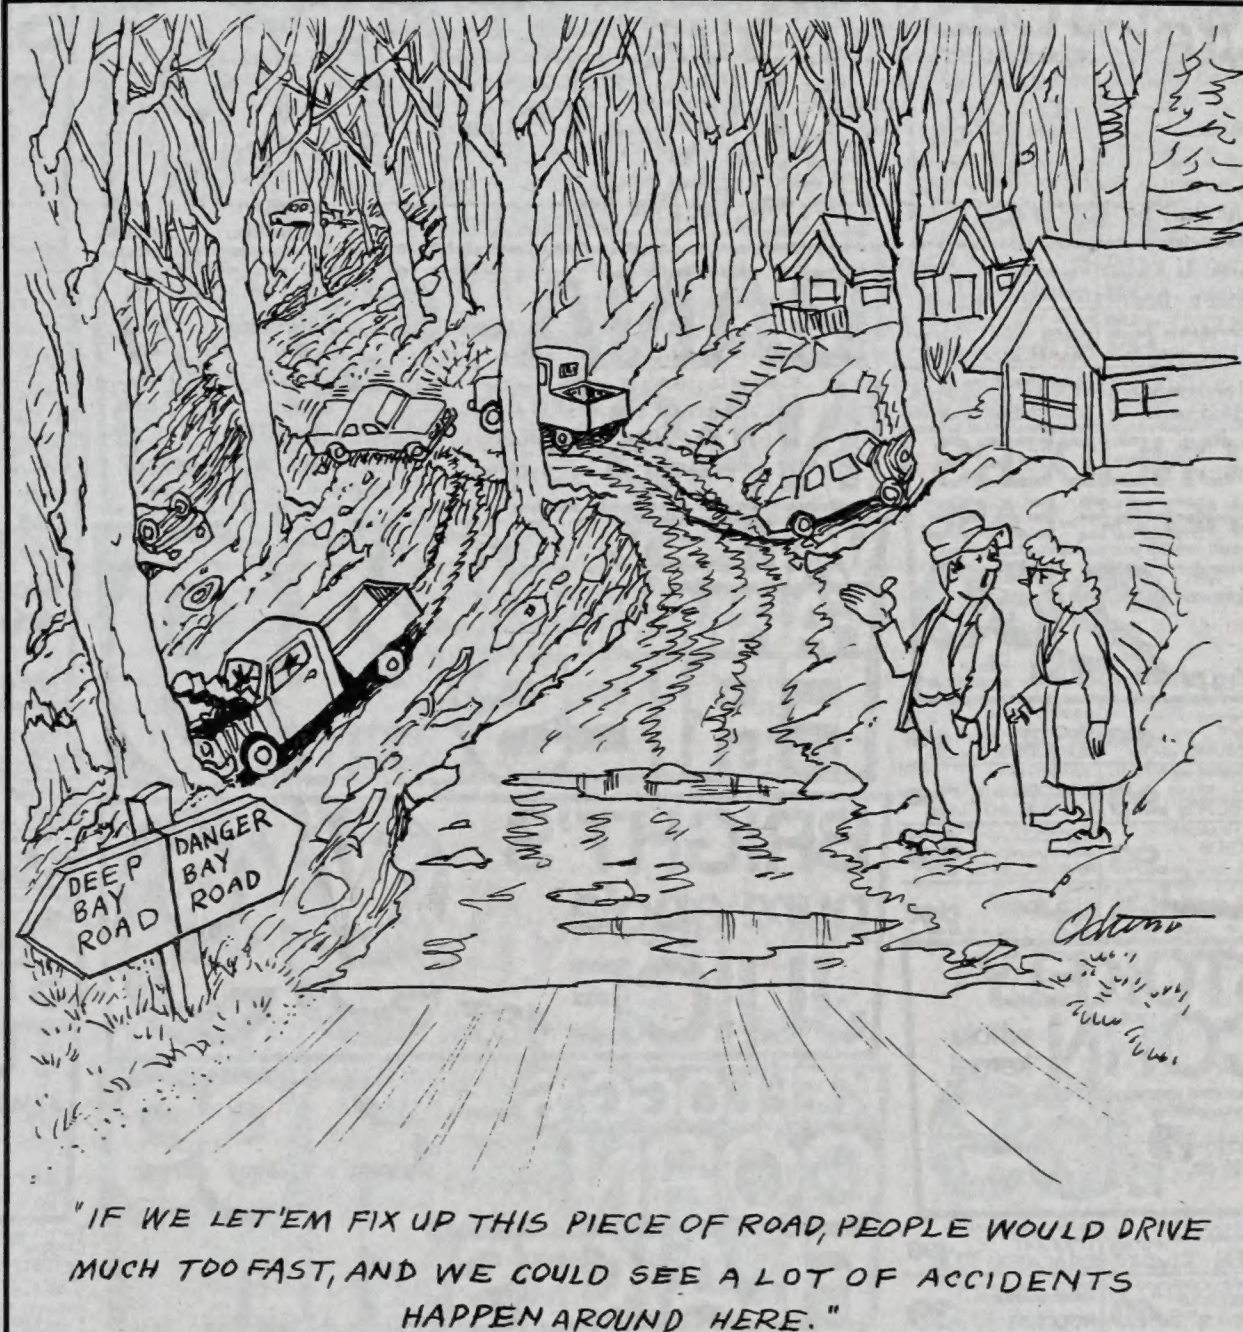

With new life sprouting all around us, it's easy to forget the world's environment is almost methodically being destroyed by man-made pollution. Spring delivers the illusion that everything is fine. It's just that, though: an illusion. Beyond the sprouting crocuses are ditches filled with litter, tossed carelessly out the window of a passing car. And the problem goes beyond what we can see—invisible pollutants are acidifying our lakes, starving our soils and depleting the world's ozone layer.

Since it is so easy to be lulled into a false sense of security by the arrival of spring, it is appropriate that our attention should be drawn to the environmental problems around us at this time of the year.

This is what Earth Day (yesterday) was all about. It causes people to consider how they are contributing to the problem and how they might contribute to the solution.

Like every other day, though, Earth Day is just a brief 24 hours long. Like New Year's resolutions, the promises are soon forgotten. The recycling bin beside the back door sits empty, our compost heaps are neglected and our trips to the dump become more frequent.

One day each year isn't nearly enough to solve this global problem. In order to halt the devastation we are inflicting on our planet and ourselves, we must celebrate Earth Day every day of the year.

Euphemisms: 'Linguistic Muzak'

The lesson today concerns euphemisms. Linguistic muzak. The pretty words and punchless phrases we use to cushion and deodorize our thoughts.

"Passing on" is a popular euphemism. So much softer and unfinal than "dying", "croaking" or "biting the dust."

"Expecting"—there's another dandy euphemism. It's vague and sexless, unlike such straightforward vulgarisms as "pregnant", "in calf" or "carrying a bun in the oven".

The military world is a veritable compost heap of euphemisms. They're the folks who gave us the "anti-personnel device" (read lethal explosive designed to shred flesh and pulverize bone). And who can forget "nuclear deterrent" (read annihilation of life coupled with long-term planet poisoning).

There's another euphemism currently making the rounds. It's a real late-twentieth century cutie.

Sanitary landfill.

Roll it around on your tongue once or twice. Sanitary Landfill. Might almost be the name of a new

by Arthur Black

complexion cream "Sanitary"—nice, clean, inoffensive adjective... "landfill"—something to enrich the soil and eradicate all those unseemly pocks and craters.

It sounds almost as if we're doing the world a favour.

In fact, we're unloading our crap.

Shrink wrap, old Loblaw's bags, bald tires, rusty bedsprings, breakfast crusts, kitty litter—not to mention greases, solvents, acids, alkalies and a mad chemist's brew of toxic, cancerous gunk too various to catalogue.

And if we can believe the headlines, we're running out of places to bury the stuff. The city of Toronto, that megalomaniacatropolis on the barely flowing Humber, is currently dispatching outriders to most of the townships and counties within garbage hauling distance of its borders. They hope to stike a deal with somebody—ANYbody—who will agree to take Hogtown's garbage.

Toronto's not alone. There's not a Canadian city or town of any consequence that has to look to deeply into its municipal crystal ball to see the garbage piling up.

And this is in Canada—an underpopulated country with nearly four million square miles of back yard!

Makes you wonder what they do in less capacious countries. Is Portugal sinking under the weight of its trash? Is Belgium up to its eavestroughs in Glad Bags? What about England?

Actually, we don't have to wonder about one city in England. An ex-citizen of Nottingham recently wrote an explanatory letter to the editor of a Toronto

Copies of analysis of Meech are available

Editor:

Congratulations to "The Times" which is the only newspaper I have read, that has reported on the Meech Lake Accord, "What It Means To You And Canada" written by retired judge Marjorie Bowker.

I appreciate this public service, because I know very little about the pros and cons of the Accord, and know that your articles will be helpful in understanding the issues involved.

I would also appreciate knowing how to obtain a copy of Marjorie Bowker's document. Could you send me information regarding this.

Volunteers saluted during this special week

Editor:

Volunteer Week begins on April 23 and will be celebrated across North America. In Ontario, it is our chance to recognize the thousands of people who contribute time and energy to a variety of causes throughout the year.

The Ministry of Tourism and Recreation relies on volunteers to help deliver sport, fitness and recreation programs across the province. Volunteers organize social events, they coach our children, they help our elderly and they raise funds for programs and projects that improve the quality of our lives.

In a recent study, my ministry found that almost 400,000 people in Ontario devote over 45 million hours annually to their volunteer work in the recreation sector, work that is worth the equivalent of over half a billion dollars.

However, we can't put a price tag on the dedication and commitment of people who expect no other reward than our recognition. Let's show the volunteers in our communities just how much they are appreciated. They deserve our support.

Please wake up

Editor:

I think the adults on this earth are taking advantage and must be sleeping. They don't seem to realize the damage they are doing to our environment.

When I grow up I want to have a good, clean environment. I want the earth to be like it was and not like it is going to be in ten years if we don't do anything about it! For example, the garbage in Toronto. In five years all the landfill sites will be full with garbage. The tire situation, I don't know why they can't be used again. We know they can in the asphalt for highways. I think it would be a lot safer.

Anyone reading this, PLEASE wake up and go outside, look around and think how you can help OUR environment!

It's time to relearn Nottingham lesson newspaper.

The letter-writer, one Ben Banham, recalled walking to school past a building known as The Destructor. Inside the building, "the waste was dumped on conveyor belts and sorted by hand. All metal was first removed, except cans, and sent to scrap metal yards. Butcher bones were sorted out and finished as bone meal for gardens; bottles and glass jars were removed and recycled. The remainder went through the furnace and finished as ashes and can. The cans were boiled and went to steel mills. That left tons of ashes which had two uses. They were mixed with cement and made into cinder blocks... (which) were used to line the inside of brick-built houses, also as partition walls inside, and plastered..."

"It would be fair to say" writes Mister Banham, "that scores of the numerous soccer stadiums in the country used tons of the ashes for several inches of drainage under the turf. Result: Nothing wasted."

Indeed. Mister Banham says The Destructor handled and disposed of all the garbage of Nottingham, an industrialized city of 300,000.

But Mister Banham is wrong on one count. Something was wasted: the lesson we ought to have learned from Nottingham.

Ben Banham is a senior citizen and The Destructor is a hazy memory. All the facts and figures cited above were true only when Ben Banham was a Nottingham lad.

And that was seventy-five years ago.

Pro-lifers' loss is Chretien's gain

Victoria Haliburton Liberals send Chretien delegates to convention

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Local Liberals have delivered the riding of Victoria-Haliburton out of the hands of an anti-abortion group and into the hands of leadership hopeful Jean Chretien.

At last Tuesday's delegate selection meeting a slate of candidates supported by the liberal association executive beat out a slate of pro-life candidates by a narrow margin.

The 12 selected delegates will attend the leadership convention being held in Calgary on June 23 to help pick a new leader to replace John Turner as head of the Liberal Party.

But at Tuesday night's meeting the issue of the leadership race was all but ignored as the two opposing factions fought for control of the delegate selection process.

As association members walked through the door of the Academy Theatre in Lindsay on Tuesday, they were handed a list of names which were identified as pro-life delegates calling themselves Liberals for Life.

A second list of 12 names was also being distributed under the heading Liberals for Canada representing the candidates being supported by the executive of the Victoria-Haliburton Federal Liberal Association.

Liberals for Life is an anti-abortion group who has been trying to take control of delegate selection meetings throughout Ontario. Members of the group have been buying large numbers of memberships to the Liberal Party in order to use a majority of votes to send pro-life delegates to Calgary in June.

In Victoria-Haliburton the Liberals for Life controlled at least 167 memberships going into the delegate selection meeting, according to association president Warren Rahn.

In order to stand as a candidate in the delegation selection process, a person had to be nominated and seconded from the floor. The nominator was then given one minute to speak in support of the candidate.

All of the candidates on the Liberals for Canada slate were nominated and seconded by Bruce Glass and Guy Mills, who took turns speaking in support of the candidates.

Glass was the Liberal candidate who ran against Bill Scott in the 1988 federal election.

According to the association's executive most of the people who ran on the pro-life slate have no previous connection to the Liberal party. In contrast, all of the candidates on the Liberals for Canada slate have a history of involvement in the party including working on various provincial and federal election campaigns in the riding.

When speaking in support of each candidate on the Liberals for Canada slate, Mills and Glass stressed the length of time spent in the party and the work done during elections.

The people who nominated candidates on the Liberals for Life slate tried to downplay the importance of past party involvement and tried to stress the fact that the pro-life delegates were not one-issue candidates and had concerns dealing with a variety of issues including the Goods and Services Tax (GST) and Free Trade.

After the nomination process was completed each of the candidates was given two minutes to speak on their own behalf. Only the 24 people represented by the two opposing slates were nominated to run in the delegate selection vote.

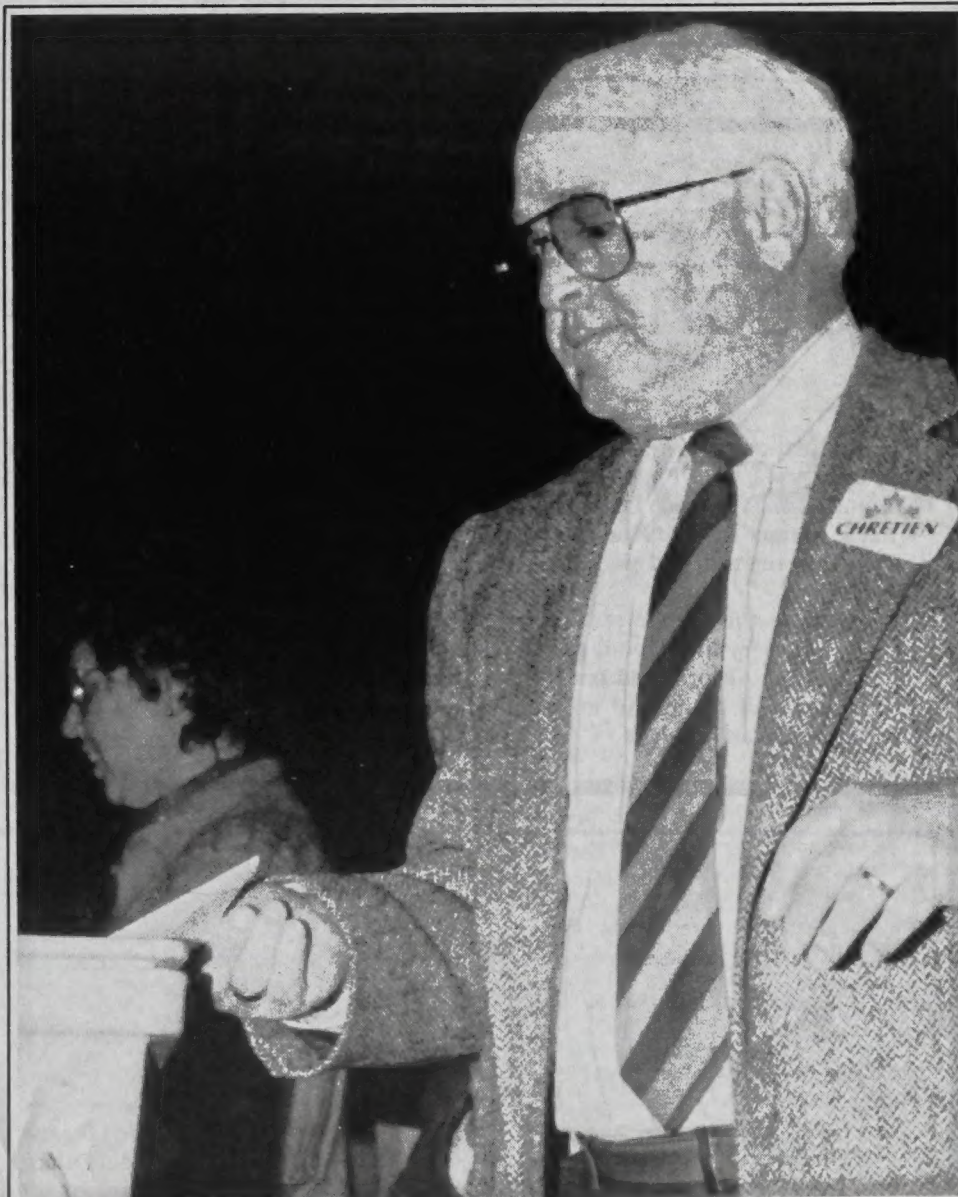

Although many of the pro-life candidates avoided open discussion of the abortion issue and concentrated instead on their interest in all issues affecting Canadians, a couple of the Liberals for Life were more blantant about their views.

Matthew Garland promised to be a "pro-life voice in Calgary."

Julie Gray spoke of the "rapid deterioration of moral fibre" in Canada and said abortion was an indication of Canada's "death-oriented culture." Gray questioned whether the association's executive would have banded together against the Liberals for Life if the main issue had been the GST or the Meech Lake Accord. "Abortion is an issue," said Gray.

Donald Ward began his speech by expressing a concern for the environment, but said "the reasons for pollution are the same as the reasons for abortion, it's convenient and easy." He also said that he was not against immigration, "but not if we are murdering our own children. That is wrong."

Frank O'Connor said his idea of a good leader, "is a leader who looks to God, God Almighty in everything he does." O'Connor said abortion on demand breaks the Fifth Commandment and "when the Lord's Prayer went out of the schools, the condom machines went in."

A Jean Chretien supporter casts his vote at last Tuesday night's delegate selection meeting. Two opposing slates went head-to-head for control of the delegate selection and the 'Liberals for Canada' came up the big winners.

Dorothy Carroll issued the strongest denial that the Liberals for Life were one-issue outsiders. "We are all Liberals here tonight," she said, "and all Liberals for Canada. None of us are one-issue people. That is totally false."

The candidates on the Liberals for Canada slate also avoided discussion of the abortion issue and several openly declared their support for Chretien. Ivan Rodd said Chretien has the ability to "mend the fences the Mulroney government has torn down."

Lynn Craigmyle said he's had to speak with Chretien in Peterborough and that the "time is right and the man is right."

Tom Mangan said he would support Chretien, "on the first ballot and every ballot thereafter."

John O'Reilly, who has been working for the Chretien camp in Victoria-Haliburton, called Chretien "a winner." O'Reilly also addressed the issue of the Liberals for Life involvement in the delegate selection process. He urged the members to vote for the 12 delegates on the Liberals for Canada slate to "send a message to anyone who tries to take over the party."

The candidates on the Liberals for Canada slate have worked for the party for many years said O'Reilly. "I'm asking you to send them to the convention."

After the speeches the voting began. Candidly some of the members of the association's executive said the vote would be very close with the Liberals for Life holding almost 50 per cent of the memberships present at the meeting.

When the counting was over however, all 12 of the delegates were chosen from the Liberals for Canada slate.

Rahn, who in the past referred to the pro-life membership drive as a "hostile take-over" urged all members of the party to "pull together and defeat the real enemy - Brian Mulroney."

Sykes benefits from new drug

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

A Hall's Lake resident is the first person in Haliburton County to benefit from a new drug being used to treat heart attack victims.

Jack Sykes went to the Minden Hospital on March 12 suffering from chest pains where he was administered with a drug called Streptokinase by Dr. Stephen Dawson.

The immediate improvement in Sykes condition was so strong that after only a short time he said he "was anxious to go outside and have a cigarette." Instead, he was admitted into the hospital. He never did get his cigarette and hasn't had one since.

Dawson says Streptokinase is a new drug at the Minden hospital and has only recently been approved for use in smaller hospitals.

It works by dissolving blood clots in the coronary arteries which minimizes the damage done to the heart during a heart attack.

Dawson says Sykes came to the hospital exhibiting classic symptoms of an acute heart attack. An electrocardiograph (ECG) confirmed Dawson's concerns and he began to administer the Streptokinase immediately. Dawson says there was an improvement in the ECG readings right away.

Because the drug unclogs the blocked artery and allows a fresh supply of blood into the heart, it allows the heart to continue pumping at a regular rhythm.

Use of Streptokinase prevents complications from setting in, reduces the chance of mortality, and allows the patient a much improved quality of life, says Dawson.

He says there was "negligible damage" to Sykes' heart compared to what could have occurred without the drug.

One of the real advantages is that Streptokinase can be administered in smaller hospitals. "The nice thing is that (Sykes) would have received identical treatment if he'd gone to the Mayo Clinic or Toronto General Hospital," says Dawson.

There are limitations in situations where the drug can be used however. It is most effective if it's administered right after the heart attack occurs. The longer the delay before treatment, the less the drug will help. If Sykes had to have been referred to Lindsay or Peterborough for treatment, Dawson says the results would not have been as good.

Also if a patient suffers a stroke, a bleeding ulcer or has received CPR then Streptokinase can't be administered.

Because the drug eased the symptoms of the heart attack so quickly and so dramatically, Sykes didn't realize how serious the attack was.

But Dawson says it was a "very significant heart attack" and use of the drug will result in a very different future for Sykes.

Without the Streptokinase, Dawson says Sykes would have had a very poor quality of life and his longevity would have been decreased.

As it is, only a month after the attack, Sykes says he feels as good as he did before the incident.

"In fact, he feels too good," says his wife Sharon. Not long after his release from the hospital, the couple were buying groceries. "The cashier hadn't even finished ringing them through when Jack grabbed two big bags and headed for the car," said Sharon. "I was madder than the devil."

The Sykes' are in the process of doing work on the two cottages they own on Hall's Lake, and Jack says he is anxious to get back to work. He is waiting for the results of some tests he's had done to find out how much physical activity he can safely endure. "It's frustrating," he says. "I feel as good as I did before. I'm just as obnoxious as I ever was."

Dawson says he was expecting good results when he used the Streptokinase and "it was gratifying to see it works as well as it's supposed to."

The effectiveness of the drug will improve the chances of people suffering from heart attacks and "help strengthen confidence in local medical resources," says Dawson.

The old Hyland Crest bus is ready for retirement, and while everyone is looking forward to the arrival of a new bus, the old one will still be missed.

Residents await new bus

The retirement of the Hyland Crest bus is being met with a touch of sadness by the residents who have fond memories of their outings in the old Travel Mate.

But they are also looking forward to the arrival of their new bus this summer to take them on picnics, shopping trips and other outings.

"Many a good ride was had in this old bus," said resident Maron Rose. She said it seems a shame the 15-year-old bus has to be retired.

Since 1975, residents of Hyland Crest have been regularly boarding the bus for trips throughout the county and beyond. Each spring for the past 15 years the residents looked forward to the day the snow finally melts away so they could again go on their outings. With Doris Robertson behind the wheel of this bus, residents have participated in local parades, gone on fall colour tours and revisited some of the places they enjoyed so much in their youths. The bus has travelled 22,000 miles of road and brought thousands of hours of enjoyment to the seniors on board.

The bus is used very frequently throughout the summer, says Robertson, activities co-ordinator for the Home in Minden. And so will the new bus the home is planning to buy with the proceeds from its highly-successful fundraising drive.

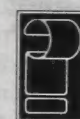

Hyland Crest has put out tenders for the purchase of a new bus and administrator Rheta Jones is hopeful it can arrive early this June. Like the old bus, the replacement will be capable of seating 24 people, including four or five wheelchairs.

The fundraising drive began in February of 1989 and was met with tremendous community support. About $65,000 has been raised to date and Jones is confident more will be available if necessary. The full cost of the new bus will not be determined until tenders are received and opened.

Other seniors in the area can also look forward to participating in some of the outings when the new bus arrives. Jones says she would like to invite residents from the local senior citizens buildings to come along on future outings. She said it is also possible the bus might be made available to seniors groups who would like to organize outings of their own.

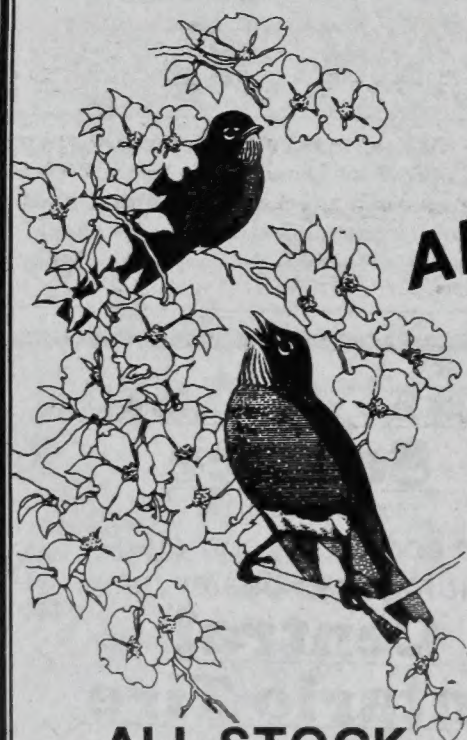

Although the Travel Mate has lost some of the glitter it had when it first arrived at Hyland Crest in 1975, Robertson says it is still a good, functional and safe vehicle. It is now being put up for sale and Robertson says will be ideal as a travel home for whoever buys it.

Deep Bay road repairs to go ahead this summer

that will be used when the road is realigned.

Kubels said he has owned the cottage for 20 years and has made improvements based on the assumption that a by-pass would be built. He also said the upgrading will ruin the looks of the shoreline. "Look at the Little Gull area of the road. It's ugly and ours will be worse."

Warden Don Shortreed said council and the roads committee has wrestled with this situation. He told Kubels it is unfortunate that his cottage will have to be removed. "We took all the information into consideration and felt this was the fairest thing."

Even if a by-pass was built, Kubels wouldn't have clear title to the land where his cottage is located, said the warden. He said it is build partly on the road allowance and partly on the shore road allowance.

Kubels is being offered $8,000 for his cottage.

Shortreed said the existing road with its narrow surface and sharp bends is dangerous for motorists. "I'm surprised no one's been killed yet with the condition of the road."

Reeve Puffer said there have been accidents on this section of the road in the past, one involving a school bus. She said this road improvement is a priority. "It's a situation that has to be dealt with now."

Existing docks and boathouses will be moved by the county if they are structurally sound, the cottagers were told. Speed limit signs will be prominently posted and the police will be encouraged to patrol for speeders.

Sewer extension approved

expediate the process in order to get tenders for the work out quickly. He says he expects work to begin on the project by the spring of 1991 at the very latest although he'd "love to see it start by the end of this summer."

The total project involves building a sewer line extension to service resorts located along the north shore of Lake Kashagawigamog, and an expansion of the existing municipal sewage plant in order to handle the additional effluent.

The estimated cost of the work is $6.54 million with provincial funding accounting for 81 per cent of the total and the rest being paid for by the resorts involved in the extension.

Davis says the township will be picking up five per cent of the resort's share of the costs which amounts to $75,000, but that most of that money can be recovered through additional hook-up fees in the village.

Dysart's sewage plant is almost at capacity now, says Davis, and the expansion will allow the township to service more of the village, as well as the resorts.

Bradley's decision to deny the resident's request for a bump-up shows that what the township's consultant's have proposed is environmentally sound, says Davis. "Whatever had to be addressed, was addressed for the minister to deny the bump-up."

"There was a fair decision made, based on what we presented and on what (the residents) presented," says Davis. "After so many setbacks, it's nice to see something on line."

Davis gives credit to former Reeve Murray Fearrey and the past council for the work they did to make the expansion possible.

Councillors take pay hike

Minden councillors have given themselves a pay raise amounting to $1,000 each per year.

The additional money is split between the annual remuneration paid to the councillors, which will increase by $750, and an expense allowance given to each member to cover costs like travelling, which increases by $250.

The raise increases Reeve Ray Moore's basic pay by 14 per cent to $6,205, Deputy-Reeve Bern Berry's basic pay by 14 per cent to $5,610, and the three councillors basic pay by 17 per cent to $5,150.

Moore's expense allowance increases by 10 per cent to $2,818, Berry's increases by 11 per cent to $2,523 and the councillors increases by 12 per cent to $2,283.

The expense allowance does not cover the costs of councillors attending conferences, which are also paid for by the municipality.

When the by-law was passed at the last meeting of council Moore told the councillors, "You do not have to be ashamed for what you are asking. You work damn hard for the money you get."

Council also approved increases in the wages paid to municipal staff. The increases averaged about 5 per cent, although in some cases might have been larger if a staff member's qualification's had improved.

"It would be nice to give everyone what they wanted, and nice if we could do better," said Berry. "We all soul searched for this. We try to do the best for our employees."

Council balks at price for property for industrial park

Another potential deal for an industrial park in Minden has fallen through.

At the last council meeting it was revealed that the township's Industrial Committee had been negotiating with Verne Graham to purchase 100 acres of land Graham owns along Deep Bay Road.

Graham submitted a signed offer to the committee in the amount of $185,000 with no conditions on the sale. The township was hoping to pay only $85,000 for the property, and make the sale conditional on Graham having the property rezoned.

The committee recommended that the township not buy the property at the price Graham was asking.

Reeve Ray Moore called the situation "disappointing." "We can't seem to get an agreement to get an industrial park underway," said Moore. "It's quite sad. Everytime we're coming down to getting property, something throws the screws into it."

There will be displays, hand out packages and Ministry staff available to discuss what constitutes fish habitat, Work Permit Applications, and the types of projects that are and are not permitted.

The Federal Fisheries Act states that "No person shall carry on any work or undertaking that results in the harmful alteration, disruption or destruction of fish habitat." Any projects in and near water must first be approved by the Ministry of Natural Resources to ensure compliance with this and other legislation. Nancy MacDonald recently spent one month as a page for the Ontario Legislature. She says the experience reminded her of a classroom full of children. "They put each other down when they're trying to make a point and they get loud and obnoxious and the speaker has to quiet them down. It's like the speaker is the teacher."

Politicians work hard Dorset teen discovers

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

After serving for one month as a page for the Ontario Legislative Assembly, Dorset teen Nancy MacDonald says she doesn't think she wants to be a politician.

"It's too much work," says MacDonald, age 13. "I wouldn't want to work the hours." But she says the experience did give her an insight into the workings of the provincial government.

In her position as page, MacDonald sat through many hours of debate in the House, debate that she found sometimes fascinating, sometimes boring and sometimes absurd.

She said the proceedings in the House reminded her of a classroom full of children. "It's like the speaker is the teacher with all these little MPP's," she said.

"Sometimes they acted really childish and got out of hand. They put each other down when they're trying to make a point and they get loud and obnoxious and the speaker has to quiet them down."

MacDonald found out about the page program through a teacher at Archie Stouffer Elementary School and obtained application information with the help of Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins.

Criteria for acceptance into the program included an overall grade average of at least 80 per cent, a place to stay in Toronto, and permission from the school and her parents. Having met all these conditions, MacDonald applied for the program last summer.

She wasn't notified of her acceptance into the program until the middle of January, and in the five months in between MacDonald said she wondered about whether or not she'd be accepted. "It was always in the back of my mind."

Word that she'd been accepted to serve as a page was waiting for MacDonald one day after she returned home from a rehearsal of the musical Cosmic Pinball. She said she was so excited she ran outside to share the news with her friends.

MacDonald's term as a page was four weeks long, from March 19 to April 12. While she was in Toronto she stayed with her grandfather Colin MacDonald.

Having been born in Huntsville and living most of her life at the Leslie Frost Centre, MacDonald had never had any prolonged exposure to Toronto before. She said getting around by herself was scary at first but after a week it wasn't so bad.

The duties of the pages who serve in the Legislature include getting water and delivering messages to MPP's while the House is in session, and running messages to and from the various government departments. As well, MacDonald and the other pages had to attend classes in the morning and afternoon.

MacDonald's day would typically start at 8:30 am when she would get up in order to be at Queen's Park by 9:30 am. Then she, and the other pages, would place in each of the MPP's desks in the House the material they would need for

Co-operation among municipalities is advised

Local politicians and building officials hone their skills at building seminar in Lindsay

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Municipal councils should try and co-operate more with each other on important issues, according to Victoria-Haliburton's MPP John Eakins.

Eakins stressed the importance of neighbouring townships working together when dealing with development, county reforms and waste management, when he addressed a gathering of municipal councillors and building officials in Lindsay last Thursday.

The meeting, called "Building Better Communities" was sponsored by the Kawartha, Haliburton and District Chapter of the Ontario Building Officials Association. Featuring a list of guest speakers, the day was designed to introduce municipal councillors to the important role played by building officials.

Eakins spoke during lunch and said the building seminar was an example of the kind of the cooperative meetings that townships should be more involved in.

He said the idea would be a success, "if we accomplish nothing more than to share ideas and agree to meet again."

As this trend towards development expands it will be increasingly moving north into Haliburton County, said Eakins.

It was these sort of rapid changes that prompted him to initiate reform of the county government system while he was Minister of Municipal Affairs. "Can we deal with the pressure of growth with a government system put together 140 years ago?" he asked.

Many of the fears expressed by local politicians about the county reform process is that it will lead to regional government, but Eakins said "We don't need regional government, we need strong county government."

"We can't sit still and say 'leave us alone, we're okay' because we're not," said Eakins. He said he's encouraged that 15 of the province's 26 counties have agreed to undertake a review of their county governments.

County review does not necessarily mean county restructuring. Eakins said restructuring will take place only if the review suggests it should. The main question that should be addressed by the review is "are we doing a good job, and Victoria-Haliburton MPP John Eakins addressed a gathering of municipal councillors and building officials at the Admiral Inn in Lindsay last Thursday. Eakins told the audience that more cooperation is needed between townships.

"We can't sit still and say 'leave us alone, we're okay' because we're not," MPP John Eakins told the councillors. He said that county reform is necessary in order to allow municipalities to face the challenges ahead.

Eakins suggested an annual meeting where all members of municipal councils with in a county could get together to discuss ideas. "We can't do it individually," he said. "We must do it together."

One of the areas which will require such cooperation is the unprecedented level of economic growth and development in Victoria-Haliburton, said Eakins.

The Kawarthas have already begun to feel the pressure of development from Metro Toronto, he said, as many more people find it more economical to settle in areas north of the city.

can we do better?" said Eakins.

The province's report on county reform suggests that 2,000 people be the minimum population for municipalities, and that some amalgamation of townships may be necessary.

Small municipalities, "don't have the capacity to deal with some problems," said Eakins. "County reform will have to be a cooperative effort."

In order to ensure quality development and economic growth, Eakins said municipalities will have to take initiatives in training their staff. "Elected people realize it's important to have trained people," he said. He suggested that councils should seek the assistance of professional people who are retired in their communities. "Make use of them," he said. "There are people there with expertise waiting to be tapped."

When companies come into the area looking to set up operations, Eakins said municipal councils have to make sure they can deal with requests for information. "If you want to impress people you have to have the answers and the expertise," he said.

Economic development will also require cooperation among the various municipalities. Eakins said "people are not impressed by boundary lines, they are impressed by cooperation across those boundaries."

The other speakers at Thursday's seminar provided the councillors with information about setting up effective building departments, aspects of the Ontario Building Code, relationships between council and building officials and some of the legal challenges facing building departments.

Minden Reeve Ray Moore attended the seminar and said he found the information to be "very, very important." He said that it was unfortunate that other members of Minden council were unable to attend.

"By my being here, it's enlightened me and I'll try to project to council the importance of the position of the building official and his duties," said Moore.

Minden's chief building official, Tom Hubercheck, is a member of the local chapter of the Ontario Building Officials Association. He said the members meet once a month to discuss common problems and deal with 'grey areas' in the building code which may be open to interpretation.

Hubercheck said Minden council is very supportive of the building department.

Filibuster a tedious affair for pages, politicians that day's session.

From 10:30 am until lunch, the pages would attend their morning classes which were French and Legislative procedure. At 12:45 pm the pages would change into their uniforms and get ready to go into the House for the day's session.

Although the House sits until 6:00 pm, at 3:30 pm half of the pages would leave to attend their afternoon classes which included Math, English, History and Art.

In the Legislative procedure class, the pages learned about the duties and responsibilities of the different members of government and held mock debates. MacDonald's class tackled the Meech Lake Accord issue during their debates.

As part of the learning process the pages had lunch with Ontario's Lieutenant Governor and the Speaker of the House and also met with the head clerk.

One of the most tedious experiences for MacDonald was sitting through the NDP filibuster during debate over the proposed changes to provincial automobile insurance legislation.

The filibuster, a drawn out speech used to delay proceedings, broke a record in the House and "really got boring," said MacDonald.

But the insurance issue also provided one of the more memorable moments of MacDonald's stay.

Opposition MPPs collected enough petitions signed by people opposed to no-fault insurance to fill two air mail bags. "They didn't want to keep discreet about how many petitions they had so they loaded the petitions into the arms of six pages and paraded them down the aisle," said MacDonald. She, along with the rest of the pages, had to follow behind the procession and pick up the petitions that fell to the floor.

There were 24 pages in the group MacDonald served with, 12 male and 12 female. She says the pages became such a close-knit group "you couldn't split us up."

After knowing each other for just two hours, MacDonald says the pages "were just like best friends."

After listening to all the debate in the house, MacDonald says it taught her the importance of keeping an open mind about issues and paying attention to what people are saying.

World Cup Slalom won't return this summer

World Cup kayak racing will not be back at the Minden Wild Water Preserve this summer. Instead, organizers are concentrating on their bid to host the white water events for the 1996 Olympics.

Ropbert Grose, a member of the Ontario Wild Water Affiliation said the decision was made last September that a World Cup race would not be held again this summer in Minden.

Grose, who is also the Affiliation's liaison for the Toronto Olympic bid, said there were too many uncertainties involved in the proposal for another World Cup race. Increasing demands from organizers of the World Cup circuit make it too risky to host a race with those uncertainties, he said.

The Minden course has been one of the sites for these international races for the past two summers and Grose said they were run on a "shoe-string budget" of about $10,000.

However, World Cup organizers were asking for $10,000 just to host a race this summer, said Grose. In addition, they required accommodation for all the athletes, transportation to and from the Toronto airport and a host of other services that would cost money.

Grose said the Affiliation would be hard pressed to put on a race this summer with a budget of $100,000.

In spite of the increased costs, Grose said it might have been feasible to host another race. He said he was working closely with former Chamber of Commerce Manager Shirley Rap-son on an application for funding from the Ministry of Tourism. And although it appeared enough money could be generated, there were no guarantees.

Without guaranteed support from the ministry, the municipality, the chamber and the community, the risks were too high. He compared it to a house of cards: if one falls, the whole house comes down. "If it was a flop, we'd be broke," he said.

Since the World Cup organizers needed an answer by September, Grose decided it wasn't worth the risk and decided to concentrate on the Olympic bid. "It was simply a business decision," he said. "We couldn't put our organization in financial risk."

County considers emergency plan

A county-wide emergency plan may be in the works.

At a special meeting last Wednesday, several county councillors spoke in favour of the development of an emergency plan that will encompass all municipalities in the county. The idea is being passed on to the county's planning committee for consideration.

Cardiff Reeve Maurice Bradley said the matter was raised at a recent meeting of fire chiefs. He said the firefighters are in favour of an emergency plan.

Several municipalities already have detailed plans of action to provide an orderly response in the event of an emergency and it was noted these could be incorporated into a county plan.

The concept of an emergency plan has been discussed in the past, said Warden Don Shortreed. He said there was full support for the idea when it was brought up a few years ago but there was no follow-up.

Locals compete in Islanders tourney

Last weekend some local hockey players participate in the Coby Islander Hockey Tournament and ended up in the B final of this 46-team competition.

The Huskies had their hands full against a strong team from Scarborough. But with hard work, great skating and food fan support, the locals won the contest 10-5. Everybody played well and deserves credit.

The team consisted of

Jeff Howe, John Ballantyne, Glenn Hall, Denis McKee, Doug Schell, Greg Newell, Colin Wilson, Scott Hamilton, Tran Larue, Ivan Ingram, Craig Crowe, Greg Carpenter, Scott Nesbitt, Randy Irwin and Newfer

Burk. Coaches were Lee Donaldson, Darin McKormick and Kevin Smith, who came in to finish the game in net when Burk was injured.

Residents concerned about improvements

Residents of an 800 metre strip of Kawagama Lake Road are concerned that road improvements will encourage more traffic to flow past their homes.

At a special meeting last Wednesday, Haliburton County Council passed a resolution to go ahead with a reconstruction project on the road, north of Dorset. The county road is to be upgraded between Highway 35 and the intersection with County Road 12.

People who live along this stretch of the road, however, expressed concerns that increased traffic will result from the improvements. Rather than improving the road, they suggested another road should be built to take the increasing traffic.

The present road is uneven and cracked and is poorly drained. It is narrow in some sections, which constricts bidirectional traffic.

The reconstruction will not be realigned and will remain with the present right of way. The drainage will be improved in order to reduce the degree of maintenance required.

World Cup won't return

Although the World Cup racing won't be back this summer, Grose has had great success in establishing the Gull River course as part of the Toronto Olympic bid. It has been confirmed that Minden will be the site for the white water slalom races if Toronto bid to host the 1996 Games is successful. A decision by the International Olympic Committee on the location for those Games is to be made this September.

Nothing more than the status quo is offered for language rights

This is the fourth installment of Majorie Bowker's analysis of the Meech Lake Accord and its implications for Canada. This week she looks at what the accord will mean for bilingualism in Canada and how it could impact on the rights of women and minorities.

THE FRENCH/ENGLISH LANGUAGE PROVISION

What The Accord Says

In the same section as the distinct society clause, there is another clause—section 2(1)(a)—which recognizes “the existence of French-speaking Canadians centred in Quebec but also present elsewhere in Canada, and English-speaking Canadians concentrated outside Quebec but also present in Quebec”.

There is nothing new in this—simply a recognition of the French/English duality of our country—except the statement that “the Constitution of Canada shall be interpreted in a manner consistent with the recognition” of this fact.

The section goes on to affirm (section 2 (2)) that the role of both the Parliament of Canada and of the provincial legislature is to “preserve” the English-speaking and French-speaking characteristic of Canada.

It will be noted that the word used here is “preserve” which means maintaining things as they are; there is no word “promote” (as with the distinct society clause). We can only assume then that French-speaking citizens residing outside Quebec, and English-speaking citizens residing inside Quebec (the minorities in each case) can expect nothing more than the status quo so far as their language rights are concerned. However, francophones in Quebec have the added benefit of the distinct society clause, in the promotion of which, the French language could be both “preserved and promoted”.

Though some of these concerns may be resolved in the 1988 revisions to the Official Languages Act, francophones (in Alberta at least) say their position should be clarified not simply an Act of Parliament, but in the constitution itself, which is the foundation of our law. They want to be assured of something more than just preserving the status quo, insofar as their francophone rights are concerned.

There is another feature about the Meech Lake provision on language. It speaks of “English-speaking” and “French-speaking” Canadians but nowhere does it mention Canadians who speak both English and French. The omission of any reference to bilingualism in the language provisions of the Meech Lake Accord could inhibit the continued development of bilingualism, which has been the official policy in Canada for over 25 years. It would seem that persons who master both languages will not fit exclusively into either category referred to in the Accord; or else they will fit into both.

Quebec's Language Bills

Quebec's Bill 101, passed in 1978 (called “The Charter of the French Language”) required all business signs throughout Quebec to be in the French language only (including posters, commercial signs and advertising). Two firms which used bilingual signs were charged with violations of this Act. They applied to the court for a declaration that they have the right to use the English language in their signs. The case eventually went to the Supreme Court of Canada — reported in (1989) 36 Canadian Rights Reporter, pages 1, 64.

The Supreme Court on December 15, 1988 held that French-only signs are unconstitutional as infringing on the right to freedom of expression, which is contained in the Quebec “Charter of Rights and Freedoms” (section 3), and the “Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms” (section 2(b)). The Court held that prohibition of other languages could not be justified as a means of promoting the French language. The Court held the attempted over-ride law was defective in its wording.

Immediately following this, namely, on December 21, 1988, the government of Quebec circumvented the Supreme Court decision, and introduced Bill 178, the so-called “indoor-outdoor law”, requiring French signs on the outside of business premises and limited English signs inside. To avoid this new law being challenged in court, as the earlier had been, Quebec made use of a revised provincial over-ride law providing that Quebec statutes shall operate notwithstanding the fact that they may violate the Canadian Charter of Rights.

MEECH: The accord was an opportunity to eliminate 'notwithstanding clause'

There was an immediate public reaction to what the Quebec government had done. It was seen as an affront to the Supreme Court of Canada. It was also seen as a suppression of the language rights of the English minority in Quebec. However, for whatever reason, Prime Minister Mulroney chose not to censure the Premier of Quebec. The immediate reaction of Manitoba Premier Gary Filmon was to officially repudiate the Meech Lake Accord, on which he had not, to that point, taken a definite stand.

Reference has been made to Quebec's use of its over-ride or "notwithstanding" clause in order to protect legislation from attack if it violates the Charter of Rights. The Canadian Charter of Rights contains a similar clause, and it has given rise to comment during the Meech Lake Debate. The clause in the Charter (section 33) allows legislatures of Parliament to declare that an Act shall operate "notwithstanding" the fact that it may violate rights protected by the Charter. It is well known that this clause was included in the Charter at the insistence of several provinces who made it their price for accepting the 1982 Constitution Act. During the debate over the Meech Lake Accord, Mr. Mulroney has been very critical of the "notwithstanding" clause, blaming the former Liberal government for its inclusion in the Charter. It is a matter of public record, however, that Mr. Mulroney (then in Opposition) supported in 1982 Constitution Act even though it contained the "notwithstanding" clause.

It is unfortunate to have such a clause in the Charter, but the Meech Lake Accord would have been an excellent opportunity to have it removed, when the premiers were in agreement on so many other issues. That was not done, and it will be very difficult to remove it in the future.

Recent Attacks On Bilingualism

Bilingualism has been Canada's official language policy since 1965. By bilingualism is meant giving equal status to English and French, respecting language rights of English and French minorities, and encouraging each to learn the language of the other. While the policy has achieved some success, there have been a number of recent events which raise doubts about its continued efficacy. The following are some examples:

(a) Several Ontario cities have declared themselves "English only", which means that services will be provided in the English language only. This was in reaction Ontario Bill 8 (French Language Services Act) which would require provincial government services to be offered in both languages in designated areas where numbers warrant. Some persons regard this as a reaction to Quebec's sign law legislation.

(b) The Supreme Court of Canada in April 1988 held that Saskatchewan provincial laws must be translated into French (based on an old territorial law). Alberta, to which this ruling would also apply, reacted by repealing the law, and enacting its own "Language Act" (July 6, 1988) which validated all previous Acts of the Alberta legislature, though not in French. Apparently in Alberta government was prepared to use the notwithstanding clause if the new Act was challenged (Jim Horsman, Intergovernment Affairs Minister, speaking at the Men's Canadian Club in Edmonton, May 17, 1989).

(c) The Northwest Territories Legislature in February 1990 expressed its objection to the Official Languages Act specifying English and French the sole language for the Territories where only 5% of the population speak French. There are five native languages which, in the opinion of some legislators, deserve recognition.

Occurrences such as these have led people to believe that bilingualism is not to be the unifying force it was intended to but instead has created an atmosphere of mistrust. Declaring "English-only cities" is hurtful to francophones, just as Quebec Bill 178 barring English out-door signs is hurtful to anglophones. The Prime Minister has not chosen to speak out on any of these violations of minority-language protections.

What the Meech Lake Accord has done is replace bilingualism by the concept of "language duality" — which could create two opposing enclaves, which may have difficulty in functioning harmoniously.

Summary

The Meech Lake Accord preserves the French/English characteristic of Canada. It does not refer to bilingualism which has long been Canada's national policy. It seems to replace bilingualism by what might be termed "Language Duality". In other words, instead of blending of languages, the effect of the Accord would be to treat the two languages as parallel.

It will be for Canadians to decide if this change concept will be a unifying force, or if it will encourage linguistic conflict. Whatever the policy, political leadership is needed to ensure it is enforced.

Concerns Of Women And Minorities

These groups enjoy certain protections under the Canadian Charter of Rights and Freedoms. Concerns have been expressed, however, that the Meech Lake Accord contains no provision that the Charter takes precedence over the Accord. Without such a provision (clearly stated) there is no guarantee against these rights being over-ridden where a conflict arises between the Charter and the Accord.

For example, if the Quebec government, in promoting the "distinct identity" clause, found it necessary to encroach on the fundamental rights of certain Canadians, it is not clear how this could be prevented. Quebec might justify such action as part of its distinct society. There are a number of rights in the Charter that could be endangered in this way. The following are some examples:

(a) equality between males and females (section 28 of the Charter);

(b) equality before the law and equal protection and benefit of the law "without discrimination, and in particular, without discrimination based on race, national or ethnic origin, colour, religion, sex, age or mental or physical disability" (section 15);

(c) minority language education rights (section 23, 59) — that is the right of certain children of French and English background to receive education in their own language where numbers permit;

(d) mobility rights (section 6) — the right to move to, reside in and gain employment in province.

Unless the protections provided in the Canadian Charter of Rights have precedence over the Meech Lake Accord, then in the event of conflict between the two, some of these rights could be infringed. Many people view the omission of a general "priority" clause as a major flaw in the Meech Lake Accord.

(In next weeks concluding installment, Majorie Bowler takes an over-all look at the Meech Lake Accord and examines the alternatives available to Canada).

Environment will be wrecked if action not taken

This week we continue running letters written by students at Archie Stouffer Elementary School who are expressing their concerns about the damage being done to the Earth's environment.

ment will be wrecked beyond repair. Picture this; your children, maybe even your grandchildren, being told that they will not have any place to live in a year or so. This might not be a very good example but if we don't start to do something about it that is the way it will be in a few years. One of the ways we could do something about this problem is to have the "Blue Box Recycling." I live in Minden and our dump has a Big Recycling Box but the recycling is only a real use to the people that live near the dump or take their garbage to the dump. Please think about what you could do to help our earth for you and your children.

Yours truly,

Do you realize that you people are polluting our air? Well, if you don't then you better listen up. We want to live, to have children, and grandchildren in a

Science discoveries

What brand of batteries is the longest lasting?

What's the secret to making light and fluffy bread?

Students at Archie Stouffer Elementary School discovered the answer to these and dozens of other questions with their experiments entered in the second annual science fair at the school last Wednesday.

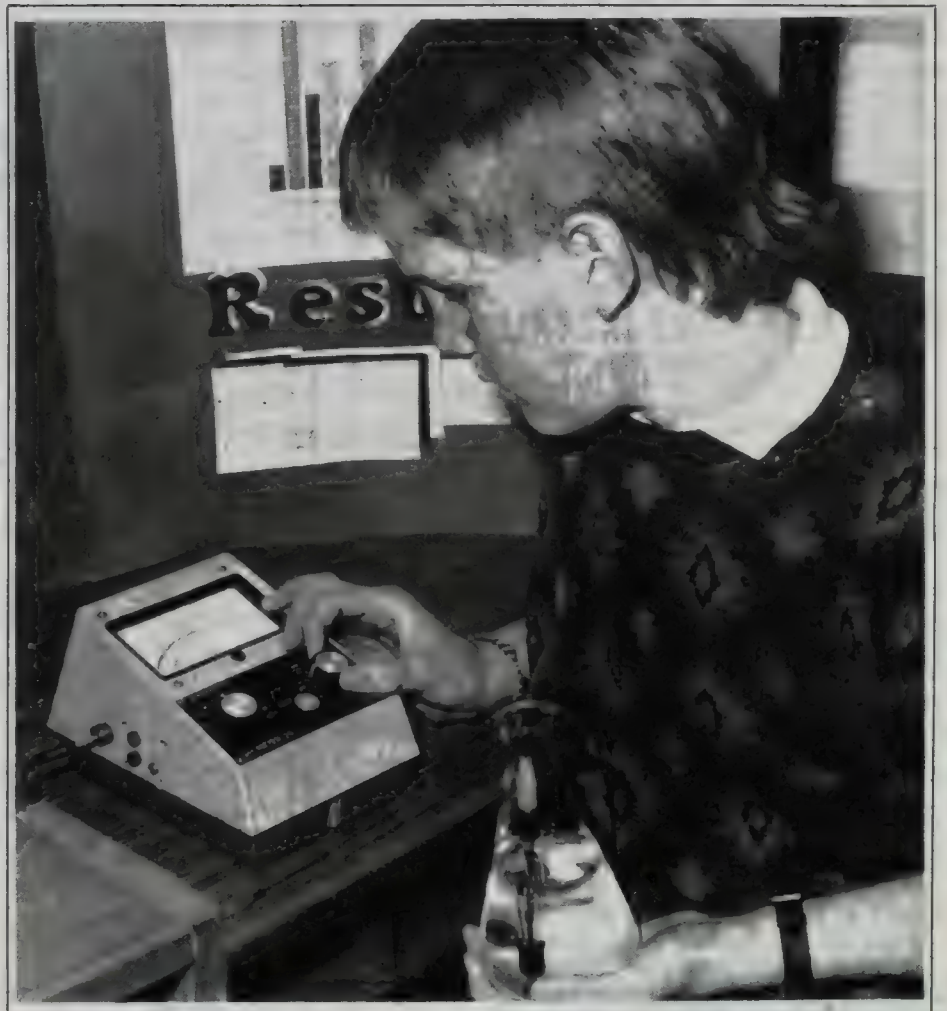

Three classrooms were filled with the finished projects that represent hours of work by the dozens of Grade 7 and 8 students involved. The non-competitive fair was an opportunity to show other students and parents what they learned in the process. Throughout the day, students from the other grades had the opportunity to view the projects and ask questions of the students who prepared them. And in the evening it was the parents' turn to come out and see the excellent accomplishments of these students.

From batteries and yeast to worms and mushrooms, the projects delved into a wide variety of interests.

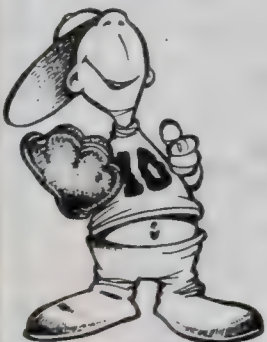

Just about everyone knows acid rain is a big problem in this part of the country, but what happens to it after it hits the ground depends on what is in the soil. Somon Reid (below) measured the acidity of rainwater after it had been filtered through various soils as part of his science project.

Soil types are one thing, but getting plants to grow in them is yet another. The key is to use the right fertilizer. For her project, Melinda Nesbitt (left) tested different fertilizers to find out which works best.

Hi Kids!
Here is another puzzle for you with a word list. Look in the diagram of letters for the words given in the list. Find them by reading up, down, forward, backward and diagonally.

H C N E R F C L O C K G B O J
T O A S T F G V J C H E I E M
Y N P R U N E S S B C E N E U

They are all in a straight line and do not skip letters. Circle the words in the diagram and cross it off the list.
It's as easy as that. Have fun!

20,000 life forms are killed off each year

Edward O. Wilson is a Harvard professor and one of the preeminent biologists and thinker in the world. He has written many articles and books about the relationship between human beings and the rest of the natural world.

Wilson's specialty is ants, especially in tropical rainforests, and his studies have led him to estimate that human activity causes the extinction of at least 20,000 species of plants and animals every year.

Last spring, I asked him how many human beings he felt the planet could sustain indefinitely and he replied: "At the present level of North American consumption, perhaps 200 million."

It's a crude estimate and perhaps he's off by a factor of two or three, but the conclusion is inescapable: There are far too many people on earth. Our Common Future, the report of the Brundtland Commission in 1987, pointed out that of the five billion inhabitants on the globe, the privileged 25 per cent in the industrialized world (that North America, Europe and Japan) use close to 60 per cent of the planet's resources and generate most of its toxic waste.

Even if we ignore almost four billion people in the developing countries who struggle to survive on the crumbs we leave, Wilson's figure means there are far too many people in the developed world.

Every child born in Canada used 20 to 50 times as much of everything on this planet as the average child in the Third World, so even though a numerical minority of our species, we are the major cause of planetary destruction.

The Brundtland recommendation that we practice "sustainable development" implies that we can have our cake and eat it—that we can continue to grow and develop so long as it's done in an ecologically responsible way. But even if we stop all growth and

by Dr. David Suzuki

stay at the present level of consumption, Wilson's estimate says it's already far beyond the carrying capacity of the planet.

Assuming that we care about future generations, we have to reduce our use of everything and in our wasteful society, we can cut back a long way before feeling any diminution in the quality of life.

Since every Canadian child adds a disproportionate load to the planet, it is remarkable that Premier Robert Bourassa of Quebec has received virtually no criticism for his attempt to use economic incentives to encourage an increase in the birth rate in his province.

This is the height of the irresponsibility.

The issue of our time is not the Meech Lake constitutional agreement or survival of Quebec culture centuries hence. It is the real question of survival of everyone in the coming decades. If anyone should be hypersensitive to environmental issues, it is the Quebecois. They know of the destruction of the maple forests from acid rain and the poisoning of beluga whales in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Bourassa's population policy is made worse by his view of nature as a potential resource to be exploited for profit.

In his book Power from the North (Prentice Hall 1985), he advocated an absurd scheme to dam James Bay and convert it into a lake for export of fresh water. He has called the water flowing into James Bay a "waste" and sees the vast expanse of rivers and lakes as a developer's dream.

Yet the entire watershed is fully occupied and developed by millions of plants, animals and indigenous people. Like most politicians, Bourassa simply hasn't come to grips with the ramifications of the environmental crisis.

On the other hand, the challenge for the Third World is to meet the needs of an exploding population with meagre resources that are rapidly being exhausted. Every addition to their already excessive populations is further burden to a ravaged planet. The plight of the Third World makes our responsibility all the greater.

We have to:

1) Set an example by deliberately and speedily cutting back on our unnecessary and excessive consumption and pollution because if we don't, every poor nation will legitimately aim to reach the same levels of affluence.

2) Provide massive aid to the developing countries to ensure that they can have some growth but only with the most environmentally benign methods and technology possible, and

3) Provide information, technology and aid for birth control.

Homo sapiens is the most destructive species ever to occupy the earth and much of that is a result of our sheer numbers.

The parochial and short term "vision" of politicians like Bourassa is inexcusable. And we must condemn the reprehensible and suicidal policy of the Roman Catholic Church's opposition to birth control.

The Pope's pronouncements to impoverished masses of people in large parts of the Third World cruelly condemn them to a life of squalor that will only worsen while hastening us all on a path of planetary ecocide.

That is what I call a sin.

Dismissal charges dismissed

Charges against councillors for the Town of Port Hope were dismissed recently when the time limit on those charges elapsed.

Councillors had been accused by their former by-law enforcement officer of preventing him from carrying out his duties.

Town Clerk Neill Wakely said a judge has dismissed the charges that were initiated three years ago by Brad Bradamore.

Bradamore, who worked for one year as the town's by-law officer, also pressed charges for wrongful dismissal. Wakely said he has heard no word on this charge for the past seven or eight months.

Bradamore was later employed as the by-law officer for Minden, but was dismissed in August of last year.

Recycling can help save the planet from destruction

Editor:

I am writing you because of the world you are leaving us. The reason I am so concerned is that all you are leaving us smaller people is a horrible world to live in and you should start doing something about it! For example, recycling. You should be taking your cans to the blue steel box and put it in the cans department.

Also scientists say that there is one hole in our ozone layer, maybe even two, but if we don't all pitch in to help our world because if you don't we all will die. So if you adults don't help our world we all will be gone including animals, trees, people and everything else in the world. So please help us save our world.

Colin Klages

Re-use and recycle to protect the environment

Editor:

I am very concerned about our environment. People have been wasting things like paper, cans, plastic bags and a lot more. I'll tell you what I think about the plastic bags. When we get the bags from stores, we should take them with us and reuse them. Paper that doesn't have things on the back should be used for messages or reminders. It seems that some people don't know where the dump is, so they throw it in a ditch. We shouldn't even use Pampers and throw them away, we should be using cloth diapers so you can wash them and reuse.

The pollution in the air is getting bad, we should be able to stop it with less gas and smoke. We need our air clean.

Jugs that contain vinegar can be used for water when the vinegar is gone. The same with containers. When sheets rip, you could make things like a pillow case. We should tell people not to throw their old clothes away because we can give them to the Salvation Army. So let's try to help our land!

Yours Truly,
Jeannie Hirstwood

The members of the museum committees are working hard to have the Bowron Home ready for its June 30, official opening. Many items of the TURN OF THE CENTURY era are needed: furniture, china, household items and to complete the furnishings of the two bedrooms we need two small dressers, two mirrors, two commodes or wash stands, one wash jug and basin set, one white basin with gold trim (we have the jug), two chamber pots, metal candle holders, oil lamps, book case, hooked or braided rugs, a crib quilt, antique childrens toys. We also need more kitchen and parlour items which we will list next week. CAN YOU HELP? Call: Wynn Newberry 286-1159, Jean Lacey 286-1559 or Doreen Berry 286-2925.

If you want to give your doggie a real treat, make up these homemade Dog Biscuits:

1 cup whole wheat flour
1/2 cup all purpose flour
3/4 cup skim milk powder
1/2 cup quick cooking rolled oats
1/4 cup cornmeal
1 tsp. sugar
1/3 cup shortening
1 egg, lightly beaten
1 tbsp. instant chicken or beef bouillon granules or 1 cube
1/2 cup hot water
Combine flours, milk powder, oats, cornmeal and sugar. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Stir in egg. Stir instant bouillon into hot water until dissolved. Slowly pour into flour mixture, stirring with fork to moisten. Form dough into ball, knead on floured board for 5 minutes or until smooth and elastic. Divide dough in half; roll each half into 1" diameter log. Cut off 1/2 inch slices. Arrange about 24 pieces at a time evenly on a large, 10" microwaveable plate. Microwave uncovered at medium (50 per cent power) 5 to 10 minutes or until firm and dry to the touch. Rotate plate as necessary for even cooking. Turn biscuits over part way through cooking. Cool on wire rack; biscuits will crisp as they cool. Repeat with remaining biscuits. Makes 5 dozen. Sounds nutritious without preservatives or unwanted additives which are not good for humans or animals!

April Showers dance a splash?

For Your Service

by Dave McAdam, Legion Branch 636

We hate to be overly optimistic but we really do think Spring is here. We are encouraged by the signs we are seeing all about us such as the planning for our annual April Shower Dance on April 21st, which at publication will have been held, as well as our Scottish dance lessons, held on the evenings of April 18th and 20th. Another draw is underway at the Branch for a beautiful fishing reel and rod. On June 16th, one lucky person will be able to go fishing when we draw the lucky ticket. The tickets are only $1.00 each and are selling rapidly. If you do not have a book to sell, please ask me for one, or pick one up at the bar. If you can't sell a book of ten, at least buy a ticket at the bar or from a seller.

Many of you know that we have held our elections. At our Annual Meeting, after a delicious pot luck supper, we set about putting into office a slate of officers and executive for the year June 1, 1990 to May 31, 1991. We are fortunate to again have Comrade Sally Bonner as our President. She took office by acclamation. The first Vice is again yours truly, and Comrade Lois Adamson is second Vice President. Our Secretary and Treasurer remain the same: Comrades Isobel Lewis and Cliff Green.

The executive is comprised of the following persons: Comrades Ann McAdam, Gladys Wruth, Pete Deller, Georgina Deeks, Bruce Porter, Ken Wallace and Frank Dunsford. Our Sgt. at Arms, Ken Walsh, has been appointed again to that position. Our Padre remains Rev. Brian Parker and our Immediate Past President is, of course, Comrade Anthony Samarillo.

Branch 67 in Lindsay held their "Vimy Night" on April 11th. At this dinner they honour Legion W.W. I veterans who they can locate. We had the honour of attending with four of our members. There were three W.W. I veterans present. They were duly acknowledged and praised by the various dignitaries.

Each of these veterans had actually fought at the famous battle of Vimy Ridge in France. It was especially pleasing at this occasion to see our Immediate Past Zone Commander, Stan Moore, who held that office, and worked hard on the formation of branch 636, receive his Legion Meritorious Service Medal.

Now that many of our members have found their way back to Minden, from the South, we believe they may wish to find out what a good time we have been having while freezing in the North. The following is a list of coming events similar to what we have been enjoying:

Legion has full slate of activities in store

April 27, 28, 29 — District Convention — Belleville.

May 5 — Ham Roll at Legion — starting 2:30, after a Spaghetti Lunch.

May 12 — Legionnaire Night and May Flowers dance, starting 6:00 p.m. at the Legion.

May 16 — Another Fun Trivia Night — 8:00 p.m. Legion, with Cub Coneybeare and Company.

We are proud to report the winners of our Legion Youth Public Speaking contest, held March 22 at Archie Stouffer Elementary School were: Junior — Bryn Gray and Intermediate — Damon Smith, who went on to speak at the zone competitions. We wish to especially congratulate Damon Smith. His satirical speech on Advertising won him 3rd place at the zone level in Lindsay. We had the privilege of serving as a judge at the competition in Minden. All of the oratory was superb and consigning a value in order categorically to the contestants was sure a challenge. They are all to be congratulated.

We are wishing you, Comrade Ebby Bishop, a speedy recovery and we hope you will be back to the Branch pronto.

"WHERE THE ACTION IS"

Volunteer week ideal time to pay tribute to workers

Report From Ottawa

by Bill Scott, M.P.

April 22 to 28 is National Volunteer Week. This week is an ideal time to pay tribute to the millions of volunteers throughout the country who make such a difference in the day-today lives of their fellow citizens and to Canadian society in general.

Volunteer work has always been an integral part of the Canadian way of life. Canadian society, as we know it, could not function without volunteers. Through their generosity and commitment, volunteers cement our communities together and help make Canada a more open and compassionate place in which to live.

About 13 million people, two-thirds of the Canadian adult population, devote their time and talents to volunteer service of some type, whether as individuals or in groups. Volunteers teach people to read and write, help newly arrived immigrants adapt to Canadian society, work for food banks, and assist those with limited mobility to carry out their day-to-day activities. They sit on administrative boards; they raise funds for charities; they are actively involved in so many different ways.

During National Volunteer Week, let us all thank the men and women across the country, from youth to seniors, who make such a vital contribution to their communities through volunteer work. A special word of thanks also goes out to those dairy companies and radio stations who generously agreed to help promote awareness of this national week.

IN MEMORIAM

MINTZ. In loving memory of a dear husband and father
DONALD R. MINTZ, taken from us April 22, 1989.

He is gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year
In our lonely hours of thinking,
Thoughts of him are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er
us,
Many think the wound is healed.
But they little know the sorrow,
That lies in the heart concealed.

Always loved and remembered by Pat, the children and grandchildren.
